About Carbin

American producer McKenzie Morrow, known around the world as Carbin, exploded onto the scene with a flurry of heavy, in-your-face tracks. Coming from an intense music background, he was inspired to produce after hearing dubstep for the first time in 2014 and has since released songs on some of the biggest labels in bass music such as Firepower, Dim Mak, and Bite This. Carbin's music can be heard around the world, played by the biggest DJs (The Chainsmokers, Bassnectar, DJ Snake, Excision, Skrillex) and at the biggest festivals (Ultra, EDC, Holy Ship, Lollapalooza). He is also rapidly growing on streaming services, with over 6.2 million plays on Soundcloud and 5 million plays on Spotify.

2018 started off strong with the release of "The Formula" EP on Firepower Records as well as 15 dates on Datsik's Ninja Nation Tour. He has played some of the biggest venues across the US, such as two nights at the Hollywood Palladium, and is slated to play some of the biggest festivals, including Lost Lands and Dancefestiopia. There's no slowing down for Carbin, as he continues to headline shows all over the country and produce top-tier music. "Music is my life. I love it, I live it," says Morrow. This level of passion and talent is why you'll be seeing Carbin's name all over bass music for years to come.
